DUDE'S LATEST FREAK,

Bottom Button of His Waistcoat.

Great is the due and devious are

His latest fad is to wear his waistcoat with the bottom button left un-

Why or where ore he cannot tell you he only knows that he does it and would consider himself caught in an awful scrape if he should be seen with that button buitoned.

It is possible that in hurrying to catch a train or a girl or something portant, some great dandy once left that button undone and the dule, who has the eye of a hawk to catch a wrinkle, caught on to the lower button and adopted it as a fad, a freak of fashion.

Now on a slim shad-bellied fellow the fad doesn't look so bad, for the waistcoat gets in all the more closely to his diaphram, and the ends unconfined by the button lie flat, and give appearance of a slighty cut away

On a fat man, however, the effect is ludicrous. All the weight and expansion of the stomach are thrown on the second button, with the result that the ends of the waistcoat curl up pears across the front

Even our best tailors are now leud ing their skill to the freak of the dude, but with no very decided success, especially in the tat man's case .-New York Press.

The Scenie Theatre.

One of the most attractive features which will be seen at the Lexington Manufacturera Exposition which opens December 7 and continues for three weeks, will be the marvelous electrical Scene Theatre, which drew immense crowds at the World's Fair, and which was a scource of wonder to many visitors. In represents a city in miniature in which tiny people move by means of electricity. Horses and wagons cross bridges and pass with their loads through the streets, which as night comes on are lighted with innumerable little street lights Lights gleam from the windows, and then as night comes on the people disappear. The lights in the windows go out and the moon slowly rises above the hills back of the city. As night wears on the roosters crow and the morning stars appear and the first flash of dawn, breaking rosy red over the hills and gradually lighting up the city, Then as the light rushes on the stars become dimmer and on the appearance of the sun, and stars and moon tade out of sight. During the day there is a real old-fashioned thunder storm, with heavy clouds, thunder and lightn ing, all in the most vivid and life-like manner. The entire work is automatic and run by electricity It is one of the wonders of modern electrical science and it is only one of Bullroad Discrimin tion. The Association of Tin Plate Manufacturers have published a statement regarding the toreign competition with their business, which we produce in this issue. Probably its most important feature is the table, which shows that foreign tin plate is carried from New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore to our interior markets at a rate considerbly cheaper than that at which railroads will carry Ameri can tin plate from the American manufacturing centers to the different consuming markets. The bitter fight and the strenuous position against the American tin ate judustry that have been made by the foreign manufactures of tin plate and their active conditions in this country, have reduced the cost of tin plate to the communer down to price that feature a very segment unit.

The reduction on tin plate under came and at last she fell asleep on the Gorman Tariff was made, as in we'l known, at the instance and for the benefit of the tin plate manufac tures in Wales and for the English transatlantic transportation companies. The existing rate of duty is not so low as these foreign friends of the present Free-Trade Administration had anticipated, and does not give them such absolute control of the American tin plate market as they had hoped for.

It would appear, therefore, that the American transcontinental railroad companies have been called upon to contribute their mite in support of this element for foreign trade by giving to foreign tin plate a fleight rate that discriminates against American made tin plate in reaching the consuming market. Adding this concession by the railroads to the concession made by the Gorman Tariff bill, the Wales manufactures secure double advantages over the American tin plate makers, an advantage that dren as Jesus, who said "Suffer little may secure for them absolute control

It is not stated in the report of the Association of Tin Plate Manufactuers what railroads quote this particularly low rate of freight of the foreign tin turn gray, the scalp needs ,doctoring plate, while charging a higher freight rate on the American article. This than Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair is a point that we should like to know. That it is due, however, does not surprise us so very much when we recollect that large blocks of stock in certain American railread companies are held and controlled by English capitalists, which, therefore, would naturally seek to serve English manufacturing interests. SHADOW OF A HAND.

Business called me to Dieppe in the summer of 1866. The cashier of the of the largest banks in New York had absconded with the funds of the institution, and I had followed his tracks to Paris. For several weeks I was unable to find trace of him, and after many fruitless endeavors the suspicion that he had gone to Dieppe took possession of me with a feeling akin to pleasure, for I was glad of an opportunity to visit this celebrated bathing resort.

Late at the close of the 14th of August I reached my destination, and immediately repaired to my hotel. The first note of the cock awoke me. The town clock struck four. I resolved to take a look at the city at daybreak. I was astonished, on reaching the street, to see it full of people, rushing in a ceaseless tide in one direction. Wondering what the attraction could be, I followed the ever-increasing crowd, surging down the Rue Grande. At the foot of the street was a large open square, where the crowd formed a perfect jam. From a platform at the opposite side I distinguished dark outlines that froze the blood in my veins.

It was the guillotine. Yes, it was the dreadful specter which I had once seen at the Place du Dome, in Paris. An executioner was engaged in oiling the grooves to facilitate the performance of the machine's terrible work. The rising sun caused the cruel knife, which had been slightly lowered from its position, to gleam coldly in its beams. It was not long until a bell tolled a doleful death clangor, and the tumbril with the condemned slowly approached. The criminal took his situation lightly, apparently in good spirits. He chatted with the gendarmes, puffing a cigar, and indifferently regarded the multitude. The rabble began to yell and whistle at his appearance. He slowly ascended the steps to the scaffold, and having gained the platform turned contemptuously to the crowd, and uttered the single word: "Canaille." This afforded me a good opportunity to regard him. He was a large, strong man, of about thirty-five. Dark eyes looked piercingly from under the bushy brows. Vice had stamped itself upon his face, which wore a positively sinister expression. I involuntarily shuddered as I beheld the man standing before me. The executioner addressed himself deftly to his task, and in a few oments all was over.

"Who was the man and why was he executed?" I inquired of a police agent at my side. He looked at me with astonishment and said: "Indeed, sir, it was Jacques Reynauld.

My curiosity was excited, and before I left Dieppe I had gathered all the details of the life and crimes of the dead man.

No longer than four months before there lived in the Rue des Armes a huckster named Morris, who was honestly but frugally supporting himself, his wife and child from the profits of his trade. They were quite respectable people, and the neighbors gladly visited the little shop. One Sunday business was un-usually brisk, and Father Morris was very tired when, at last, he closed the door and entered the room where the servant was just setting the table for supper.

"I should relish some oysters today," said Mme. Morris, as her husband entered.

"I fear it is too late, my dear; it's a quarter past nine o'clock." "Justine thought that the shop the corner might yet be open." "Send her, then; the truth is I am myself as hungry as a wolf." The servant took a backet to get the oysters, and left the door partly open to save her master the trouble of unlocking it when she returned. The shop at which she was to get oysters was locked, and Justine went lown the Rue Grande to procure them elsewhere if possible.

It was some time before she found a shop open, and when she returned the clock struck ten. She had been absent three-quarters of an hour. To her surprise Justine found the house locked. She thought the wind had blown the door shut, and she tried the kneb. However, the door was locked from within. "They must have retired," thought Justine, indignant that they had locked her out. She knocked repeatedly-no

The girl hereupon pulled the bell with all her might—in vain. In her agxiety she related her trouble to several passers-by. The police were sent for, and an effort was made to sent for, and an effort was made to force the door open. The hall was dark; one of the gendarmes atumbled over an object; he stooped down, and his hand touched something wet. A light was produced, and a horrible scene was revealed. Poor Morris lay in the hall with his throat cut; the whole door was covered with blood. In the little research

Rue des Armes several men were passing along the Rue Grellard. They had spent rather too much time over their cups and were anxious to get home. Suddenly a man clad in nothing but his shirt appeared on the roof of one of the houses, carrying a child in his arms, and erying: "Murder! Murder!" Pass-ers-by could learn nothing, however, except that the murder had been committed in the house. A rush was made for the door, but it was found to be locked from within. A. few crashing blows sufficed to break it, and a man ran upstairs. In the fore hall, at the head of the strirs, man was found with his throat cut. He was dead. In the chamber a woman was found dangling out of bed with a similar wound, and in the kitchen lay the servant girl, disposed of in a like manner. It was undoubtedly the work of the same person that bad committed the crime in the Rue des Armes. In

The young man who had been seen on the roof the next morning gave the following testimony:

"My name is Pierre Dulac; I am twenty-two years old, and a watchmaker by profession; for two years I have been employed in the house of the murdered Manton, whose family consisted of his wife, a child and a servant girl. On the night of the 22d of April we retired early. I slept in a garret chamber; next to me slept the servant girl, who usually had the child with her. It was when I swoke, feeling very thirsty. My water pitcher was empty, and I concluded to get a fresh supply. However, before I had time to descend the first flight of stairs I saw a man sneaking up the lower flight. Being very nervous, the murder in the Rue des Armes had so stunned my faculties that when I saw the man I was positively unable to move hand or foot. The stranger had nearly reached the door which led to M. Manton's room when the door of the same suddenly opened and my employer stepped out. The murderer hurled himself upon him and pressed his hand upon his mouth to prevent outcry. I noticed that the villain had only three fingers on his left hand. Terrified at what I saw, I ran upstairs again and entered the girl's chamber. Marie was not there, but the child was fast asleep. I took it in my arms and ran upon the roof. That is all I know."

In the foubourg of Dieppe in a rather obscure house, all alone with a servant girl, resided a widow named Beaumaurice. She was the widow of an army officer and distinguished for great firmness of character. The excitement throughout the city had not been able to disturb her composure, despite the fact that she was comparatively unprotected. On the 30th of April, at about ten o'clock, Mme. Beau-maurice, who had all day suffered from a painful headache, entered her boudoir. She was very tired, and sat down in a large, easy chair to rest herself. Opposite her stood her dressing case, whose curtains extended down to the floor. Back of her, upon a small table, stood the lamp. The lady had begun to dis-robe herself, when she noticed some-thing that made her heart stop besting. On the floor she descried the shadow of a man's hand. The hand had but three fingers.

The situation was self-evident The murderer was concealed within her dresser. The lady remained perfectly composed, debating what to do. After a short deliberation she approached the door and called the servant. When the girl appeared she said: "Marie, do you know where M. Bernard lives?'

"Very well, my lady." "I forgot that I shall have to pay five hundred francs to-morrow morning. You must go immediately and get the money. To insure your getting the bank notes from M. Bernard, I will write him a note."

While the girl waited, the lady

She handed the servant the note and sent her away. She then sat down in the fauteuil and waited. Yes, a full hour the lady sat in her room, within whose dressing-case the notorious murderer was concealed. She sat there calmly determined. The shadow of the hand appearing now and then was the only evidence of the presence of the murderer.

of the presence of the murderer.

When finally the gendarmes arrived; Jacques Reynauld was, after a desperate resistance, taken priscuer. His guilt was established without difficulty, and, as I related at the beginning of this sketch, he received the well-deserved punishment by the guillotine.—Washing-tee Park

Perhaps I can give the REPUB-LICANa alittle light on the subject. I think there is no politics in it and but little grub, which consists principly in spoiled beef. Last spring a man from this part of the county was sentenced to 50 days confinement in the county jail for a trivial affair in a little drinking spree. The man is considered a truthful, honest man. managed to smuggle a letter through to his brother giving him the bill of "KNIGHTS of Protection" is the fare, which consisted in rotten beef, balance of his term of incarceration, and the jailer received pay for same off the county. I wrote the old gentleman up at the time in the Owensboro Protectionist. *

The fact of the business is the Daviess county jailor is an old Mossback Democrat and the rest of officials are of the same shabby material and all this with a grand jury off the same bolt, we cannot expect anything BILL HARDTIMES.

Marks Re-elected-

Tuesday Courier-Journal contained the following: "Mr, J. W. Marks, was elected tobacco inspecter for the Louisville Leaf Tobacco Exc hange; he will therefore continue in the office which he has held during the past year. The election was held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in the office of the exchange, and was made sons, fourteen of whom represented the tobacco buyers and the remaining fourteen the warehouses of the city. There was only one candidate nominated in opposition to Mr. Marks. He was Mr. "John M. Bedford, of Bourbon county. The election of Mr. Marks was almost unanimous. P. et. al. 6 town lots Shelby county, who, at that time, was on a visit to her brother, James Nickles, who lived near the home of Mr. Phillips... The home of this couple was the east side of the Stephen Phillips' farm where they lived mearly all their married life and where they are now buried.

They had ten children-eight of them now living-the oldest and youngest of them are dead. Thomas Phillips has been a business man all of his life. When a young man he was an administrator and later he was a constable, deputy sheriff, arbitrator, public building committeeman, school teacher and a transactor of public and private business until his last sickness. He was a member of the Bap tist Church at Pond Run-now Pleasant Grove--for forty seven years, and died à deacon of this church.

For forty years he has been a mem ber of the Masonic Fraternity at Fordsville and was one of the old ard new charter members.

Thomas Phillips for the age he lived in and his surroundings was a remarkable man. He was not only competent to transact all business he undertook but he was successful in his undertakings and honest and just to all. He was a devoted Christian and a zealous church member and his personality bore a striking resemblance to what we have read of the William Penn Quakers or the society of friends. Twenty years ago, he spoke to the district undertaker to make his coffin, and to satisfy him the undertaker made it four times and sold three of these coffins to other parties and the fourth one Mr. Phillips secured for himself by sending his son to pay for it July 1st, 1893, but it remained at the undertakers until the day he died. At Lo'clock p. m. December 8th, as he had requested before his death, his funeral sermon was preached at his home by his church pastor, the Rev. W. R Oldham. Before taking his text the pastor delivered an address on the many virtues of the deceased brother. The pastor took for his text the 38th verse, 3rd chapter, and Samuel, which reads thus, And the King said unto the seruants, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a good man fallen this day in

There was present on this occasions his church, the Masonic Fraternity and the community in general and after services at his home and viewing the femains for the last time, during which several favorite hymns of the deceased were sung, his Masonic brethren conveyed them to his family graveyard, a few steps from his home, where, after the sad rite of the order was complied with, they were laid by the side of his companion, who preceded him November 4th,

The Pains of Rhommatten

According to the best authorities, originate in a morbid condition of the blood. Lactic acid, caused by the decomposition of the gelatinous and albuminous tissues, circulates with the blood and attacks the fibrous tissues, particularly in the joints, and thus causes the local manifestations the disease. The back and shoulders are the parts usually affected by rheumatism, and the joints at the knees, ankles, hips, and waist are also sometimes attacked. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sersaparilla a positive and permanent cure for rheumatism. It has had remarkable success in curing the most severe cases. The secret of its success lies in the tact it attacks at once the cause of the disease by neutralizing the lactic acid and purifving the blood, as well as strength. ening every function of the body.

Emmit Cate met with a ve accident Tuesday of last week about s o'clock, while chopping on a small tree near Sulphur Springs. His axe glanced and landed on his left foot laying it wide open. He then told a hand near by what had happened and started to the house a distance of one hundred yards; after going about so steps he fell and was then picked up by Ike Stevens and carried to the house where his wound was dressed. He was very restless Tuesday night but is getting along now as well as could be expected. His many friends will regret to hear of his severe accident, but we hope he will soon be able to be out again.

vary according to the stage and next location of the disease. The first stage of catarrh of the nose and head produces discharge from the nose, sneezing, pain in the eyes and forehead, weak, and sometimes watery eyes, occasionally loss of memory. In the last stage the discharge ceases, and dry offensive scabs form in the nose, polypi growths sometimes form in one or both nostrils, and the pain in the head and eyes is much less. Unless something is done to prevent, the catarrh will follow the mucuous membrane into the lungs, where it will be followed by cough, night sweats, rapid loss of flesh, and the other dread symptoms of consumption. To all such people Dr. Hartman's treatment comes as a boon. It is only necessary to send name and address to Hartman, Co-lumbus, Ohio, and complete directions for first month's treatment will be sent free. Not only is it successful in curing catarrh than the treatment of the catarrh specialists, but it is in the reach of every person in this land. A medicine which is the principal part of Dr. Hartman's treatment, known as Pe-ru-na can be bought at any drug store, and is a remedy without equal for catarrh in gets in cash $500, The contest closes all forms coughs, colds bronchitis, in April, but the nearest guess first consumption, and all climatic diaeases of winter. The Whisky Business. Please allow me space in your valuable paper for a few words on the above subject. There is but one in your midst, and that is more taxes to help pay for the school that is in your town. Those that are in favor of whisky being sold are atraid to let the vote be taken in the entire precincts in which they wish the accursed stuff to be sold. When the question is being talked the agitators say that it is better to have open saloons than blind tigers. So it is, but there or if two subscribers who are nearest is no necessity for either; and if the no blind tigers nor any other kind of lay in subscribing. In the first place tigers to sell poisonous stuff to make you need the Weekly Commercial men crazy who drink it. I have heard Appeal, your wife needs it, your chilsome good church members argue that they were going to vote for whisky because it was a necessity in cases of than it has cured, and more crimes combined. More homes have been made desolate, more women and children have been brought to want, misery and woe than the greatest famine that ever was known, besides the suffering caused by the use of strong drink. It is not the one that uses intoxicating drinks that is the sufferer altogether, it is the wife, children, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, neighbors, friends and associates that mkst suffer, not only want, misery, food and raiment, but death itself. A man that will vote for something that he knows to be a curse and a nuisance rather than a benefit, then that man hasn't religion enough to keep him out of hell. Husband, father, son, will you vote for this traffic that will cause you misery, woe and distress? Then the curse will be upon your mead While there is life there is hope, but after death the in no changing persons character in this world in the world to ecue. When the 30th of January, 1895, comes let those, who expect to vote on this all-important question, think and teason with himself this way and say will this be of benefit to myself and my neighbors? If so, then I will vote or this ky, but if it will be a curse, then I will vote against it. You will be removed to the same of t sponsible for your deeds whether they sponsible for your deeds whether they be good or evil. You good church medicine. members who are in favor of this accursed sale of intoxicating drinks, look well to your welfare and the welfare of those with whom you are associated, and do unto others as you would that others should do unto you, and be true christians or else get out of the church before your children stumble over you into hell and their cries will be, "Father was Roach 94. AN INTERCEPTED LETTER said Aurora, looking up from a chest BY AMY RANDOLPH,

'Well," said Aurora, "what shall The dreary equinoctial rain was over; the oblique autumn sun glinted on matted drifts of wet leaves and pools of water in the road; a solitary red chrysanthemum lifted its tufts of flowers under the window. They had opened the window wide to let in the air and light after Grandaunt Miriam's funeral. There were the wheel marks and deep ground ruts yet in the road where the hearse had been driven up to the gate; but the yellow hickory leaves, fluttering down like golden rain at every gust wind, were fast obliterating

'Oh, of course-we've got to

"And we've got nothing to live upon but this old house and thirty acres of rocky, up-hill ground!" said Aurora. "Grandaunt Miriam's pension died with her, and she never saved a penny out of it-though, indeed, how could she, poor old thing? And I don't see that there's anything left for us but to keep board-

"But, who will board with us?" said Adeline, in her feeble, inefficient Aurora shrugged her shoulders impatiently. You never had any faculty, Ad-' said she, "and I s'pose it's too late for you to begin to reform now. But I should think you might have had the common sense to put two and two together. Ain't there that big red brick factory a-buildin' by Lemming's falls, and won't it be full o' girls in two months' time? And won't they be glad to have a handy place to board? I've been counting up-there are four, five, six rooms we could spare, as well as not. And get the materials to cook with, and I s'pose you could, at least, look after the rest of the house?"

"Yes, I could do that, I think!" said meek Adeline, who always had a sense of inferiority in her sister's heart forever. have the same guess, the first one right to work and get the house for boarders. "Now?" gasped Adeline. "Of course, now! Do you suppose I meant next year?" retorted her sister, irately. "The house is full of old truck and furniture, and will have to have half a dozen bonfires, at least, before things 'll be decent-ly cleared out. And we've got to do. it ourselves, Adeline! We can't afford to hire anyone to help us. And so the sooner we begin the better."
"Yes, I suppose so!" assented Ad-

So, the next morning the Field girls set themselves diligently to work. Aurora had a certain hardheaded energy of purpose that rather enjoyed toll and bustle, but poor Adeline's heart failed within her at the prospect. The tears came into her eyes, as she took Grandsunt Miriam's old faded clothes and books and papers out of the musty-smelling Grandount: Miriam had ruthlessly crushed in the bud that one little love affair which she had ever known. Not, she thought, that, she had any right to call it a love afher, one beat March Grandaunt Mir am had Aurora answered slowly. "Twenty years ago is twenty years ago!" "But he wrote this letter to me, and I never got it! And he has a

"Yes, I s'pose he has:"

Adeline thought it over all day. There was no more work for her. She sat at the window, with the floated down through the misty air outside, thinking—thinking! Aurora glanced at her sometimes, but she did not speak. She herself, a hardfavored masculine woman, had never had a lover; she could not help feeling a secret reverence for the sister who had attained this crown of wom-

At sunset Adeline rearranged her hair, bathed her face and tied on her little crape bonnet, with the stiff, white frill in front. "What are you going to do?" Au-rors asked.

"I'm going to him," said Adeline 'I'm going to show him this letter and tell him all-how it happened. But as she trudged along the leafcarpeted autumn lanes Dr. Hunt's carriage whirled by. He was sitting in it, and he was not alone. As Adeline stopped and looked after it, the doctor checked his horse. A pretty, red-cheeked girl got out. And then the doctor drove on. Still Adeline stood there, looking at the dust that followed the wheels.

"Oh, Adeline," said Eustacis Bent, "we were just going to your house! I wanted to see if I could get you and Aurora to do some sewing for me. Dr. Hunt was taking me there when I met you. He asked me to be his wife. I am to be married to him in January."

"Eustacia Bent's fair, dimpled face was all aglow; her blue, long-lashed eves shone like stars; the roses of I'm a pretty decent cook if I could | last June were not pinker than her cheeks. She was two-and-twenty. Adeline Field was forty. The elder woman, with a pang, recognized the contrast, and in that moment all the newly revived hope died out of her

"No," said she, "we can't take in "Then," said Aurora, "let's go any sewing. We're getting ready you'll have to get some one else, Eustacia, But—but I wish you joy, all the same. I hope you'll be very happy—you and Dr. Hunt."

She turned and crept home again. The sun had dipped below the horizon now; the air was chill and gray and frosty—fit omen of her coming years of solitude. As she walked spiritlessly along, she felt as if her heart were a lump of lead within her. "Well?" Aurora breathlessly asked, as she reentered the dismal old house where the neglected fire was dying out on the iron dogs, and a melan-choly cricket chirped on the hearth. "What did he say?"

"Nothing; I haven't spoken to him," said Adeline, mournfully. "I met Eustacia Bent. She's going to be married to him in January, and that ends the whole thing." "Yes," said Aurors, "that ends the whole thing." Grandaunt Miriam, sleeping under the churchyard wall, might have been content. She had had her own way.-N. Y. Ledger.

-928 .59 Died Fighting and fee of England doesn't keep a great standing army, but what she does keep has ever before it glorious history to make it powerful. Recently an advance column was cut up by the Matabeles in South Africa. All the London papers publish details obtained from a Matabele chief who was an eye witness of the last stand made against the enemy by Maj. Wilson and the force under him. The small body of white men were surrounded by between two thousand five hundred and three thousand natives. From the first they kept up a heavy fire, which only flagged when many of their number were wounded and ammunition began to give out. The fight lasted about three hours. Wilson is described as standing, wounded in several places and covered with blood, firing steadily from rifles which were loaded and handed him by another wounded man at his side. At the last mo-ment the few English who could still rise stood shoulder to shoulder, took off their hats and sang together what, by the chief's account, is believed to have been "God Save the Queen!"-Inter Ocean.

Forty Winks for Insomnia

"I have a new remedy for insomnia," said the nervous member as he entered the club rooms recent-

If it is good, tell us about it." "It is good, tell us about it."
"It is very simple. Just go to bed and take the most comfortable position for sleeping. Then slowly open and close your eyes. If, after forty winks, you are not asleep, then try forty more. The great difficulty forty more. The great difficulty with victims of insomnia is that they almost always fall to thinking of the events of the day. This may be prevented by persistent counting, but that is itself a mental effort and wakes one up. Not so, however, with winking. I defy any of you to think of anything else while you are engaged in this simple exercise."—Utica Observer.
